Michael Radich (Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand) Michael.Radich@vuw.ac.nz

Michael Radich took his PhD at Harvard University, where he studied Chinese Buddhism with Robert Gimello and Chinese thought under Michael Puett. His dissertation is entitled "The Somatics of Liberation: Ideas about Embodiment in Buddhism from Its Origins to the Fifth Century C.E." (2007). His main research interests lie in Buddhist philosophy and doctrine, Yogācāra Buddhism, and the comparison of Indian and Chinese systems of thought. He is presently Lecturer in the Religious Studies Programme at Victoria University of Wellington in New Zealand. Michael has contributed more than thirty entries — many of these being of substantial length — on a variety of topics concerning Chan, Yogācāra, and Tathāgatagarbha thought, and has edited, corrected, and supplemented numerous other entries in this area.
