About the lecturers:

Robert Kritzer (Ph.D. UC Berkeley) is Professor at Kyoto Notre Dame University. He specializes in abhidharma and early Yogācāra, and is the author of two books, Rebirth and Causation in the Yogācāra Abhidharma (Wiener Studien zur Tibetologie und Buddhismuskunde 44. Wien: Arbeitskreis für Tibetische und Buddhistische Studien, Universität Wien, 1999) and Vasubandhu and the Yogācārabhūmi: Yogācāra Elements in the Abhidharmakośabhāṣya (Studia Philologica Buddhica Monograph Series 12. Tokyo: The International Institute for Buddhist Studies, 2005). He has written on the intermediate existence (antarābhava) and accounts of childbirth in Indian Buddhism, as well as on the meaning of the term Sautrāntika. Other interests include the relation between Buddhism and the Indian medical tradition. He spent the winter term of 2006 at McGill University as a Numata visiting professor. Currently, he is preparing a critical edition and annotated translation of the Tibetan translation of the Garbhāvākraṅtisūtra found in the Mūlasarvāstivādinaya Kṣudrakavastu.

Robert Kritzer目前為日本京都聖母大學教授，專門領域為阿毘達磨與初期瑜伽行派。他著有《Rebirth and Causation in the Yogācāra Abhidharma》與《Vasubandhu and the Yogācārabhūmi: Yogācāra Elements in the Abhidharmakośabhāṣya》，也寫過文章討論中有 (antarābhava) 以及印度佛教對於生產的看法。其他興趣包含佛教與印度醫療傳統的關係。

Mario D'Amato (BA, Loyola University Chicago; MA and PhD, University of Chicago) is an Associate Professor in the Department of Philosophy and Religion at Rollins College. Before arriving at Rollins, he taught at Hampshire College (Amherst, MA, USA). D'Amato specializes in the study of Mahāyāna philosophy, with a particular focus on the Yogācāra school, and has published papers on Yogācāra thought in Journal of the International Association of Buddhist Studies, Journal of Indian Philosophy, Indian International Journal of Buddhist Studies, and Semiotica. He is currently completing a book-length study and translation of a Yogācāra doctrinal treatise known as the Madhyāntavibhāga (Distinguishing the Middle from the Extremes). (quoted from Religion Compass: http://www.blackwell-compass.com/subject/religion/article_biog?article_id=reco_articles_bpl083)

Mario D'Amato現為羅琳斯學院哲學與宗教系副教授，在此之前亦層任教於罕布什爾學院。專長於大乘哲學，特別是瑜伽行派，並於許多著名期刊發表文章，其《辯中邊論》的研究與翻譯已即將完成。
